Shooting Suspect, 3 Others Arrested

A 27-year-old South End Negro was arrested at a Cambridge factory today in connection with the shooting of a Back Bay music teacher in his Fenway apartment—the fourth arrest in the last few hours in the drive to curb a Greater Boston crime wave.

The Negro was picked up by Lt. Francis G. Wilson of the homicide squad and Detectives Joseph Curran and Joseph O'Donnell of Back Bay Station. He was held as suspicious when officers discovered a revolver in his locker.

His seizure followed capture of two South Boston youths after a two-mile chase of a stolen car and arrest of another youth in Cambridge in a chase in which four shots were fired.

Earlier, a force to 12 patrolmen aided by the Shore Patrol battled 300 sailors in the downtown theatrical district. The sailors were attempting to release two shipmates who had been arrested while allegedly attempting to steal an auto in Tremont st., near Stuart st.

Meantime, all police departments in New England were alerted when the Navy reported the theft of two sub-machine guns, four rifles and two riot guns from the Westerly, R. I., air base.

The two South Boston youths were caught when the car they had stolen in Quincy crashed into a hydrant. A third youth who was in the car escaped.

The arrested youth was identified as a resident of South Boston, the other was a juvenile.

The Cambridge chase threw the Kendall sq. district into an uproar as a cruising car officer fired four shots to halt the speeding car, which was finally edged to the curb at Hampshire and Portland sts. Edward Rosenberger, 17, of Columbia st., Cambridge, was arrested at gunpoint as he stepped from the car. He was charged with using a car without authority.

The car, a beach wagon, was the property of Joseph Da Costa, 28 Elm st., Cambridge. It had been reported stolen from a gas station at Broadway and Elm st. 20 minutes before Rosenberger was robbed.

The victim of the Fenway shooting, George Albert Vincent, 37, is at City Hospital with bullet wounds in the jaw and right side. He told police that one of two Negroes who entered his apartment shot him without warning. His 73-year-old mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Vincent, was asleep in the apartment at the time.

The wife of Dr. Tobias Stein, also a tenant in the building, heard the shots and aroused her husband. He went to a window and saw the two Negroes running in the direction of Boylston st., he told police.

At the hospital, Vincent's condition was said to be not critical.

Miss Mary McBride, 40, of Third st., Cambridge, was the reported victim of an attempted criminal assault. She told police she had accepted the offer of a man she met in a cafe to drive her home. In Memorial dr., he attempted to attack her and she was beaten and thrown from the car.

She was picked up by Metropolitan police and taken to Massachusetts General Hospital, where she was treated for contusions and abrasions.

In the downtown clash between sailors and police a sailor giving the name of Harry Koehler, 21, was arrested and booked at the Warren ave. station on a charge of attempted larceny of an auto and assault and battery on a police officer.

Liquors valued at $460 and $250 in cash were stolen by thieves who broke into three Boston cafes last night. Entered were Owen's Cafe, Beach st., South End; Side Door Cafe, Summer st., and Sullivan and Keefe's Cafe, Market st., Brighton.

Naval Air Fleet Due Over Hub

As more ships and men of the Pacific Fleet arrived today at New England ports for observance of Navy Day, Greater Boston was poised for a full week's naval Victory celebration to be ushered in tomorrow with memorial services aboard ship and ashore.

Weather permitting, the memorial exercises will be climaxed in the afternoon by the greatest demonstration of naval air power ever witnessed in this area, when all types of fighting planes, including Hellcats, Corsairs, dive-bombers and torpedo bombers, will take off from the carrier Wasp 150 miles at sea and fly to the Squantum airbase.

The Wasp and the heavy cruiser Fall River, leading a flotilla of smaller craft, are scheduled to arrive in port Monday morning.

Large crowds are expected to witness the arrival of the mighty air fleet, in which will be 78 of the Wasp's 100 battle-plane complement. If the weather is inclement the flight will be staged Monday while the Wasp is approaching Boston harbor.

The Navy has announced that the Quincy-built carrier, following its stay in Boston, is to be refitted as a transport to aid in bringing back GIs from Europe. But not before the public has had the opportunity to visit and inspect the "Big Stinger" and examine the various types of planes, weapons, bombs and rockets which helped to blast the Jap navy from the seas.

Two of her officers who flew on from Balboa ahead of the Wasp said that the work of transforming the carrier into a "magic carpet" will probably begin next month.

Com. James A. Thomas of Columbus, O., air operations officer, and Lt. Com. Frederick Morris of Philadelphia said she is due to arrive off Boston Light Monday morning at 10:30.

Hub Man Held As 4th in Murder

Charles L. Mantia, 30, of North Russell st., West End, fourth man arrested in connection with the slaying of an ex-marine, today pleaded not guilty to a charge of murder in Lynn court and was ordered held without bail for the grand jury.

Police charged Mantia and three other men killed Robert (Tex) Williams, 18, of Haverhill, in a Lynn marsh on Aug. 11. His alleged accomplices were arraigned Oct. 17 and held without bail.

Mantia was extradited from Manchester, N. H., shortly before police announced they had found the gun believed to have been used in the killing.

Test Tube Super-Babies Urged for A-Bomb Rulers

By WILLIAM F. ARBOGAST

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20 (AP)—Production of a generation of test-tube babies to become "atomic bomb guardians" of the future has been proposed to a congressional committee.

The unidentified originator of the plan to have the United Nations sponsor the rearing of hundreds of children through artificial insemination submitted it in writing to the House Military committee.

"We've considered everything else, so why not this?" jocularly commented one member of the committee, which has been wrestling for weeks with atomic bomb control legislation.

Fathers of the test-tube babies who would become custodians of the atomic bomb after they laid aside their rattles, would be "United Nations leaders selected by the best qualified engenists." The mothers would be "women of the finest eugenic value," and "leaders in achievement."

The bottle babies would be reared under United Nations chaperonage, educated in the best schools of all the nations, and would owe allegiance to the United Nations. They would be given government-financial medical care and for all practical purposes would be "silver spoon" babies.

Mother-to-be would be given a chance to select the prospective fathers from a list of unidentified eligibles supplied by renowned engenists working under supervision of the United Nations organization.

Mothers would retain maternal control of their children during infancy, under supervision. But to avoid the embarrassment of an unmarried mother being referred to as "Miss" while she had a child in tow, the proposal would provide special titles.

U. S. A-Bomb Peril Greatest

NEW YORK, Oct. 20 (AP)—U. S. Sen. William J. Fulbright (D.) of Arkansas said today that the United States was "infinitely more vulnerable" than Russia to atom bomb attacks.

Fulbright said in a speech before a Foreign Policy Ass'n forum that the 20 largest metropolitan areas of the United States contain 40,000,000 people, and "in one night of carefully planned attack without warning we could be paralyzed."

He said:

"It is not so much the ability to make great quantities of the bombs that would count in an atomic war. Rather, it is the ruthlessness and the will to attack first, without provocation, that would be decisive."

Instead of "secretiveness and suspicion" in connection with the atom bomb manufacture, Fulbright advocated "the widest possible dissemination of scientific knowledge, coupled with an efficient system of control."

Remarking that "I do not believe there is a defense against total destruction inflicted instantaneously," Fulbright urged a revision of the United Nations charter to provide international vigilance by a group of scientists.

President Truman sent a message to the forum saying "The American people are embarking on a new course of full participation in international affairs," and that "it will demand of all of us great patience, and more than that, a much clearer understanding than we have ever had of the problems of other people."

The United States offered today to participate in attempts to settle peacefully the rebellion of natives in French Indo-China and the Dutch East Indies.

Indian Summer Still Hanging On

Indian summer kept up the good work in Boston today after shoving the mercury up to 84 yesterday to crack the 35-year record for that date.

Plenty of sun and temperatures in the 60's were forecast for Sunday, much the same as today. Tonight's low was expected to be near 45.

Criticism of Her Divorces Worries Carole Landis

By ROSALIND SHAFFER

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 20 (AP)—Carole Landis frankly admits she's done some worrying over recent criticisms of her marriage record.

Carole was the first on a list of film pesonalities set for criticism by the Motion Picture Research Society, Inc., a group stating as its purpose the barring from film work of stars with a record of divorces.

Carole says she is misunderstood.

"I paid for all three of my divorces myself," she told me. She is reticent about her latest divorce, granted privately, but insists all three marriages were undertaken in good faith by her, for love, and love alone.

"I guess I must be naive," giggled Carole.

Carole Landis

About the other aspects of being a three-time loser, Carole says,

"Why do people attack me for getting three divorces? It's legal; if there's something wrong about it, why don't they attack the laws of the land, and let me alone?"

Like most successful glamor girls, Carole is a small town product—San Bernardino, Cal.

Carole says she still believes in men, and hopes to get the right one yet.

Wainwright Tells Inside Story of Bataan's Fall

By GEN. JONATHAN M. WAINWRIGHT

(Copyright, 1945, King Features Syndicate, Inc. Reproduction in Whole or in Part Strictly Prohibited.)

Well, here it was at last. Maj. Gen. Edward P. King, my successor as commander of the forces on Luzon, had sent his Chief of Staff, Brig. Gen. Arnold J. Funk, to Corregidor to tell me that King might have to surrender—so great was the Jap pressure on our malaria-weakened and starving forces.

Funk stood before me, in my little office in Malinto tunnel on Corregidor, that grim afternoon of April 7, 1942, waiting for my answer. On my desk lay a message from MacArthur, in Australia:

"When the supply situation becomes impossible (MacArthur's message read) there must be no thought of surrender. You must attack."

I looked at Funk, a picture of weariness.

"General, you go back and tell Gen. King that he will not surrender. Tell him he will attack. Those are my orders."

Gen. Funk waited a moment. Then he said, "General, you know, of course, what the situation is over there. You know what the outcome will be."

"I do," I answered. I could not say anything else. Funk turned and walked out . . . a fine soldier.

It was with heavy heart that I sent in my report to Washington, a communique which read:

"Fresh Japanese troops are continuing their forward drive in Bataan with great vigor. A heavy attack on our new position is now in progress. Dive bombers and attack aircraft are bombing and machine-gunning our front lines. Heavy bombers are continuing their attacks on our rear areas near the southern extremity of the Bataan Peninsula.

"The present Japanese attack is the longest sustained drive of the enemy since operations began in Bataan. Waves of shock troops have attacked almost continuously, without regard to casualties, which have been heavy on both sides. Our forces have stubbornly resisted every advance."

On April 8 I sent Cols. Pete Irwin and Galbraith to King's headquarters on Bataan to arrange for three battalions of the 45th Infantry to fall back to Corregidor, in order to stiffen our defenses on The Rock. Irwin and Galbraith saw King, who sent the necessary order to I Corps. Barges also were arranged for at Mariveles to pick up the men. Col. Doyle of the 45th and his staff came down to Mariveles after making all arrangements for their men to follow them.

But the men became snarled on the jammed roads and never made it.

Through King I was able, however, to arrange for the proper medical officers on Bataan to get the nurses to Mariveles, preparatory to moving them across the short but vital stretch of water to The Rock.

I contacted King's headquarters repeatedly during April 8 and the news was all bad. Parker's Second was being rolled back as one might roll a stiff rug. There was no stopping the Japs on that side of Bataan. In a last-minute effort to relieve the pressure on the east I contacted Gen. Jones and ordered his I Corps to attack. But some of his men actually dropped from exhaustion as they moved forward.

That night of April 8 the nurses were bundled into a barge, and a tug towed them to Corregidor.

You may talk all you want of the pioneer women who went across the plains of early America and helped found our great nation. They were, indeed, the wondrous mothers of our land. But never forget the American girls who fought on Bataan and later on Corregidor. They had no training in pioneering hardship; theirs had been a life of conveniences and even luxury. But their hearts were the same hearts as those of the women of early America. Their names must always be hallowed when we speak of American heroes.

The memory of their coming ashore on Corregidor that early morning of April 9, dirty, disheveled, some of them wounded from the hospital bombings—and every last one of them with her chin up in the air—is a memory that can never be erased.

MAJ. GEN. EDWARD KING
"Tell Him He Will Attack"

Beebe and I sat up all that night of April 8-9 in the tiny sitting room which Beebe had built for MacArthur in a recess of the Malinta tunnel. I was on the phone most of the night, telling King's headquarters that Jones was to attack with some of his I Corps units and to send other units to the support of the more oppressed II Corps; trying to spring the 45th's battalions out of their snarl and talking to hard-fighting Brig. Gen. Clifford Bluemel, who was personally directing the last stand along the river line north of Cabcaben.

I last spoke to King at 3 a. m. April 9. He did not mention surrender. My last order to him was to launch a counterattack at dawn.

King's last combat action, in answer to that order, was to throw all of his reserves into the battle, down to the dismounted 26th Cavalry and his Engineers. He even ordered his antiaircraft gunners to abandon their guns, and sent them forward to fight as infantry.

Of all nights, when even food had lost its meaning, that was the night one of the two submarines arrived from Cebu with canned goods and rations. It came through the mine field around Corregidor and quietly surfaced.

But just as our hunger-weakened men began to unload the food, the Japanese spotted the sub and bombers attacked it. The sub cast off its lines, submerged and went out beyond the mines, where it lay on the bottom the rest of that night and all the next day. The following night, by which time it was joined by the second submarine and the Japs had brought guns down to the tip of Bataan, one of our mine sweepers shot its way past the Jap guns and got to sea. The subs surfaced, the food was quickly placed on the mine sweeper, and the little ship shot its way back to Corregidor through the Jap guns again.

But the men on Bataan, who had prayed for that food, never tasted it. At about 6 a. m., April 9, three hours after last speaking to King, my night duty officer, Col. Traywick, came to me to report that King had sent the Japs an offer to surrender.

I was shocked.

"Go back and tell him not to do it," I shouted.

But it was done, I soon learned. Let me say here that I have no criticism of Gen. King for accepting the situation and surrendering. It was a decision which required great courage and mental fortitude. I was soon to find out that it is not easy for an American to surrender.

I had my orders from MacArthur not to surrender on Bataan, and therefore I could not authorize King to do it. But King was on the ground and confronted by a situation in which he had either to surrender or have his people captured or killed piecemeal. This would most certainly have happened to him within two or three days.

A terrible silence settled over Bataan about noon on April 9. It deepened with the British OK, Blast Labor 5-Year Plan

Special to the Boston Evening American

LONDON, Oct. 20—Public opinion in Britain seemed reconciled today to the labor government's peacetime control over the economic life of the nation but the British people as a whole are surprised at the length of time during which socialistic restrictions will be imposed. This was the outstanding impression gathered in a survey of London public opinion on the drastic powers obtained by the labor government in Commons for execution of its five-year controlled economy plan.

The survey showed the following significant trends:

1—A large majority of those questioned felt some kind of controls are necessary for the time being, but disagreed as to the scope and time limit of the controls.

Continued control of prices and wages, as well as governmental land acquisition for demobilized soldiers was generally approved.

2—Only a small minority connect the government's program with the term "Marxism" or even "Socialism." Most people feel that certain social reforms are overdue, but do not go in for any Marxism of the German or French continental brand.

3—A few of the persons questioned considered the program a threat to individual freedom. But they deemed it unthinkable that their freedom of speech, assembly or movement could ever be impeded. Most of them resent labor control and forced billeting of troops, but hope these are only temporary measures.

4—Others feel that the government should be given a chance to show what it can do.

5—Many young people seem to suffer from economic claustrophobia and want to emigrate to America and the Dominions.

Nearly Half of AEF Back Home; Ships Speed Others

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20 (AP)—Five months and one week after V-E Day, the job of getting American soldiers home from the Atlantic and Pacific is nearing the half-way mark. Barring unexpected developments the War Department expects to make good on this target it has set itself:

All soldiers in Europe home by February except those needed in the Army of Occupation and for disposal of surplus Army property.

All soldiers in Pacific home by June except those needed for occupation in Japan and Korea, to man outposts such as Guam and the Philippines, and to dispose of surplus property.

War Department figures show Uncle Sam had in the European theater on V-E Day 3,059,000 men; in the Mediterranean, 498,000, in North Africa and the Middle East 3000 and in the Persian gulf 18,000, a grand total of 3,607,000 for the German end of the war.

Of this number 1,718,000 had returned home by Oct. 15

On V-J Day the Pacific strength was 1,565,000 and in the China-Burma-India theater 231,000, a total of 1,796,000.

Of these 293,000 had returned by Oct. 15, leaving 1,503,000 to come. Out of this group likely will come a large part of 400,000 for occupation and outposts. Thus from the Pacific area there are about 1,103,000 to come home soon.

These figures add up to over-all totals of 2,011,000 men brought home and 2,622,000 yet to come, besides those to stay.

By Christmas 366,000 men are expected from the Pacific, with 125,000 in the "pipe-line"—staging areas and on the high seas.

The 43d Division will have returned from the Pacific when the Neshoba and the Etolin dock Oct. 23 and 25. Nine ships bringing back the 38th Division from the Pacific are at sea, the first due Oct. 29.

The 37th and 31st Divisions will be home from the Pacific before Christmas.

Strikes Grip 8 Bay State Firms

Labor tension remained high today with strikes reported in eight Massachusetts companies. Latest walkout was in the Cheshire plant of the U. S. Gypsum Co., where Peter P. Keller, president of Local 12287, United Mine Workers, charged the company failed to comply with a NWLB directive of last December ordering wage increases.

Five hundred employes of the Wico Electric Co., West Springfield, members of the International Ass'n of Machinists, AFL, remained on a strike based on demands for an 18 per cent wage increase. The walkout has been ruled illegal by the union.

In the Package Machinery Co. plant, Springfield, 150 men are staging a sitdown strike.

In Nashua, N. H., bus service neared normal today with settlement of the 11-day strike of the Hudson Bus Lines, but in Springfield the drivers of the Interstate Buses Corp. remained out.

The two-week-old strike of 1200 workers at the Merrimac Mills in Lowell continued today after the workers unanimously rejected a company compromise.

SHIPPING—Shipping at the port of Houston and entire Central Gulf coast of Texas tied up by walkout of AFL warehousemen and dock workers in wage dispute; general back-to-work movement by AFL stevedores in New York harbor after 18-day strike of 35,000.

GRACE MOORE
Her Chauffeur Has Troubles

Grace Moore Driver Held, $15,000 Loot

WORCESTER, Oct. 20—Henry Gibson Barnes, 50, who had the very nice job of chauffeuring Grace Moore, opera star, today was sentenced here to serve two weeks for drunken driving—but that is the least of his troubles.

For Barnes, arrested here in Miss Moore's beach wagon, also had along the singer's finest furs, her very best lace scanties, a dozen bottles of champagne, five pounds of sugar and a lot of her husband's wardrobe.

Even before Barnes could be led away to jail, State Police Lt. Harry Tucker of Connecticut appeared with a warrant charging breaking and entering and larceny of goods worth $15,000 and Judge Frank Riley surrendered the prisoner. Tucker also paid a $5 fine assessed on Barnes for driving without a license and then took him back to face charges in Newton, Ct.

Barnes, who says Miss Moore fired him a month ago, was picked up by police while wheeling swiftly along Route 20, a half-filled bottle of champagne for company. He told Patrolman Eskel Smith he was driving the star's baggage to the Copley Plaza in Boston and that she was coming along by train.

The patrolman believed him, all right, but figured he ought to take him in anyway since Barnes had no license to drive and was altogether too happy for the highways.

Examination of the baggage in the beach wagon disclosed a silver fox fur, two mink coats, a grey coat mink lined, 10 blankets and robes, a lace negligee and a whole raft of lacy undies.

There was also a very nice outfit belonging to Miss Moore's husband, Valentin Perrara, including a dozen ties, a pair of striped silk pajamas, a bathrobe, a suit of morning clothes, two sport jackets, and the champagne.

Barnes told Judge Riley he came back last June from a foreman's job with an Army civilian construction crew in the Azores.

He then added that he met a girl and went to Bridgeport where they had fun until he ran out of money and sought work at a Bridgeport employment agency. The job turned out to be chauffeuring for Miss Moore.

Baby 17 Days Old Flies to Dying GI

NEW YORK, Oct. 20 (AP)—William J. Morrow, 21-year-old sailor suffering from a rare disease resulting from battle wounds, was happy today, even though doctors say he has little chance to live. His dearest wish was granted last night when his newborn daughter was flown from Atlanta to his bedside in Brooklyn Naval hospital.

The baby girl, born 17 days ago, was brought with her mother in a special Navy plane, authorized by Sec. Forrestal, in response to the young father's constant plea.

Hugo's in Scituate Destroyed by Fire

Hugo's, famed South Shore eating place in Border st., North Scituate, burned to the ground today in a general alarm fire which caused damage estimated at more than $100,000. Only six blackened chimneys remained of the big rustic building when firemen of Scituate, Cohasset, Hingham and Hull had extinguished the blaze under direction of Scituate Fire Chief Howard Cole.

Lost in the blaze were valuable stocks of liquor, some of it irreplaceable, according to Hugo Ormo, the owner. At the height of the blaze bottles of the liquor could be heard exploding.

The fire, which apparently started in a garbage room off the kitchen, was discovered by Daniel Galvin, a watchman, who was on the second floor.

Starting downstairs, he found his way barred by smoke and flames so he climbed through a second-story window to make his way to the near-by Ormo home. Ormo summoned firemen and Chief Cole ordered the second and general alarm.

Fanned by a stiff breeze, the flames made rapid headway through the stained pine boarding of the restaurant buildings and gained too great a start for the firemen to salvage anything.

In addition, the nearest hydrants were some 1500 feet away and firemen were forced then to lay about a mile of hoselines to reach the blaze.

Additional water was pumped from the river a short distance away.

The flames, roaring high into the air, were visible for miles and attracted throngs.

Shortly after the blaze was discovered, Mrs. Ormo recalled that two pet cats were in the building.

With the aid of Morgan Day, a hunter, she broke down a rear door of the building and managed to save "Pal," one of the cats. The other, however, was believed to have perished.

The cause of the blaze was not determined immediately and an investigation was ordered.

MRS. CATHERINE DESROSIERS
Slain by Soldier-Husband

The ex-soldier, Joseph Desrosiers of San Antonio, Tex., was arrested Thursday night by 20 peace officers as he crouched beside his wife's body in a car mired in a cornfield near Aurora, a Denver suburb.

Officers said Desrosiers surrendered a 32-caliber pistol identified as the weapon with which they said he shot his wife, remarking to them: "I would have been dead, too, if my gun hadn't refused to work again."

He blamed the tragedy, police said, on what he claimed was his mother-in-law's interference with his marriage.

Marie Woidill, 26, led the posse to the cornfield. Det. Sgt. Leslie Sawyer quoted her as saying that Desrosiers raped her twice, the last time in the front seat of her car while his wounded wife, Catherine, 23, gasped out her last breaths on the floor in the rear.

Hysterical and scantily clad, Miss Woidill, who said she came here recently from Atlantic City, N. J., dashed into Denver police headquarters and sobbed out her story.

Marie Woidill Jos. Desrosiers

Police reported Miss Woidill declared that while driving through Aurora in bright moonlight she looked in the rear-vision mirror, saw Desrosiers put the gun to his wife's temple and pull the trigger.

Noxon Appeal Hearing Set For Tuesday

John F. Noxon, 49, Pittsfield lawyer and veteran of World War I, under death sentence for the murder of his mentally deficient infant son, will make a last attempt to obtain a new trial and freedom when his attorney, former Gov. Joseph B. Ely, appears before the full bench of the Massachusetts Supreme Court Tuesday.

The court will hear arguments of the defense attorney and Dist. Atty. Charles R. Alberti.

J. F. Noxon

Noxon was found guilty by a jury on July 6, 1944. The State contended that Noxon deliberately sent a current of electricity through the body of his son, Lawrence Noxon, six months old. The defense argued that the child accidentally touched the cord of a defective lamp while the defendant was repairing a radio nearby.

Howes-Wolcott Bridal

By BETTY ALDEN

BEING A TYPICALLY modern deb who devotes more time and thought to Nurses' Aid work than fuss and feathers, Augusta Peabody Wolcott has passed up the elaborate family heirloom lace and jewels which you might expect to adorn the wedding gown of a daughter of the aristocratic Oliver Wolcotts. Instead she is wearing a simple full skirted white chiffon with "just a touch of the lace that came on the dress" and a plain tulle veil for her marriage this afternoon to Kenneth Howes, Jr., in Ascension Memorial Church, Ipswich.

The Wolcotts are hoping for another warm October day so the reception at their Hamilton summer home can spread out into the gardens surrounded by colorful autumn foliage. Augusta's cousin, Mrs. Gilbert Fuller, Jr., and Ken's sisters, Edith and Nancy, are the bridesmaids, wearing yellow net with ruching headbands to match and carrying chrysanthemums.

Kay Winthrop

The groom's brother, Osborn, is best man. They are sons of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Howes of Chestnut Hill. The newlyweds will live in Cambridge where the groom is resuming his studies at Harvard after serving as an ambulance driver with the AFS in Africa and Italy.

THE SYMPHONY Luncheons, which have become an enjoyable part and parcel of the Hub's famous Friday Symphony concerts, began for another season at the Copley Plaza yesterday. After dessert and demi-tasse, Boris Goldovsky, noted pianist, interpreted the afternoon program with piano illustrations and delightful comments on composers and music.

Mrs. Prescott Cumner and Mrs. Clement Stodder, sharing a ringside table, hustled through their lemon chiffon pie and coffee in order not to miss a note of Goldovsky's playing. Others sure to more fully appreciate the concert after the enlightening interpretations were Mrs. Samuel Chamberlain, wife of the well known Marblehead artist, who attended with Mrs. Harold D. Hodgkinson, Mrs. George Hawley with Mrs. Franklin Hobbs, Mrs. Charles Higginson and a foursome which included Mrs. Cooke Lewis, Mrs. Elias Field, Mrs. Merchant Philbrick and Mrs. Alfred Fish.

Others were Mrs. John Perrin, a diamond locket glistening at the throat of her lime green blouse, Mrs. Alexander Steinert in becoming cinnamon wool with matching feather hat, Mrs. T. Mott Shaw, Mrs. Lucius Thayer, Mrs. H. Bigelow Emerson, Mrs. William King and Mrs. Paul Goddard.

Costume Jewelry Exciting

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE, Beauty and Fashion Editor

THROUGH THE LOOKING GLASS, back to when time was young and fashion took its lead from history's famous coquettes . . . that's the theme for the new, romantic and exciting costume jewelry. Always a feminine fancy . . . jewelry this season has that "jingle, jangle, jingle" verve . . . playing up to the coquette in you with a dazzling array of enchanting necklaces, bracelets, chatelaines and delightful fripperies destined to make you outshine all the lovelies of by-gone eras.

Coro has created variations of the Victorian choker in single, double, triple, and even quadruple strands. The 1945 Victorian band . . . however . . . drips with all sizes of pearls, some in new colors, such as ginger bronze. "Something blue" has been added to the cream, pink and gunmetal pearls of other years . . . and they're looped, garlanded, tiered in solid colors or in two or three-tone combinations.

New, too, are the pins . . . the pearl-studded horseshoes, ovals and bars . . . which grandma favored to fasten her lace collars. But the GI sweetheart will use them in pairs or as a sequence of three or four in graduated sizes.

FABULOUS NECKLACES

Right from Queen Nefertiti comes the flexible, slithering serpentine necklaces in pink and yellow gold which are often paired with snail earrings and matching bracelets . . . or with an armful of chunky bangles. Coro designers have given a modern twist to the medieval chatelaines . . . some with bas-relief plaques from which dangle crowns, halberds, daggers, pikes, signets, link chains connecting them. Others are Greek masks, keys, or hearts and darts, joined by double link chains.

Palladium jewelry is also coming to the fore in fashionable New York showings. At John Rubel's recent Fifth Avenue display a series of fabulous necklaces were featured . . . including the "neck ribbon" . . . a string of beads or a length of gold or palladium with clips fastening at either end . . . to be worn draped around the throat or attached to the neckline of the dress. There were dazzling palladium or gold pinwheel spines tipped with rubies, diamonds and sapphires . . . swirling around the rich cool center of a huge oriental pearl . . . worn on flat snake chokers, often with earrings to match.

MARKED TREND TO WHITE

This and other collections emphasize the marked trend to white in jewelry and the growing use of massive planes of metal as the background for design and important gems. The double earclip . . . a delicate cluster of jewels at the top and the lobe of each ear . . . and connected and held in place by a hidden gold wire at the back of the ear . . . is very new.

Whether your purse permits of precious and fine gems or the wonderful, glorious imitations . . . costume jewelry is an important adjunct to the costume this season.

FOR SHARP accents for a black broadcloth suit, a white ostrich hat and muff . . . and large aquamarine clip surrounded by alternating bars of large and small diamonds . . . do the trick. Sally Victory designed the hat and muff . . . and the Bureau of Fashion Trends endorses the entire outfit.

GOLD JEWELS are very smart this season . . . and on a grey velveteen dress, accented with a flaring helmet type hat (at left, above) lend up-to-the-minute smartness. Graduated gold segments hung on a gold snake chain make the collar-like necklace. The earrings are double hoops of gold with a matching clip worn in the hat. And, don't overlook the chunky square gold links in the wristlet.

PRETTY, pretty is the modern daisy pattern (at right, top) used for the large clip and matching earrings worked in with a cluster of rubies and surrounded by diamonds in the center for interesting elegance . . . and dramatic counterpart to John Frederics' hat.

HERE ARE unusual clips in a fish design and made of real sea shells, brilliant orange in color. They are mounted in gold with tiny rubies for the eyes . . . and worn as an effective accent with a beige turban of wool knitted fabric. Yes, it's a Lily Dache turban.

JEWELRY and the more the merrier is fashion's edict this season to dress up the costume. Spotlighting this profile beret of black satin and a sheer wool dress of gold with flattering inserts of taupe wool is the gold clip worn on a snake chain choker . . . with the same flared design as the dress. Gold button earrings and a wide bangle bracelet worn with one of oblong links are finishing touches.

Lovely Cutwork

These cutwork motifs lend themselves to a variety of linens. Pattern 638 has transfer of 14 motifs 2½ x 4 to 4 x 17 inches. Send 15 cents in coins for this pattern to Needlecraft Dept., Boston Evening American, 82 Eighth ave., New York 11, N. Y. Print plainly pattern number, your name, address and zone. Fifteen cents more brings you our newest Needlecraft Catalogue — the 1946 edition — 112 illustrations of designs for crochet, knitting, quilts, embroidery, toys, handicraft—a free pattern for cuddle toys printed right in the catalogue.

Choice Dessert for Fall

By MARTHA LEE

Household Editor

ON FALL DAYS, old-fashioned bread pudding adds a world of warmth to dinner meals. It can be elegant and economical at the same time if you use leftover bread to make it. And it can be served hot or cold with coffee cream, or warm top milk, or hot jelly sauce.

OLD FASHIONED BREAD PUDDING

1½ cups diced day-old bread
3 cups milk, scalded
2 eggs, beaten ½ cup sugar
½ tsp. salt ½ tsp. cinnamon
½ cup raisins, nuts, figs or coconut

Soak bread in milk in greased baking dish. Combine eggs, sugar, salt and cinnamon; stir into bread mixture; add raisins and set in pan of hot water. Bake in moderate oven (350 deg. F.) for 45 to 50 minutes, or until knife comes out clean when inserted in center. Serve with your favorite sauce. Makes 6 servings.

Adding a touch of glamor to a plain bread pudding is as easy as making the pudding itself. Try a touch of black cherry jam on top of each serving, for instance. Or substitute honey for the sugar by using twice as much honey, by measure, as the amount of sugar the recipe calls for. Add ½ tsp. lemon extract to enhance the good flavor of the pudding. Or serve the pudding with an attractive meringue topping, as in the following recipe:

MERINGUE BREAD PUDDING

3 tbsp. softened butter or margarine
4 to 5 slices bread
3 egg yolks, slightly beaten
½ cup sugar ½ tsp. salt
3 cups milk
1 tsp. vanilla extract
6 tbsp. sugar
3 egg whites, stiffly beaten

Butter bread and arrange in baking dish. Combine slightly beaten egg yolks, ½ cup sugar, salt, milk, and vanilla extract, and stir until sugar is dissolved. Pour over bread. Place baking dish in pan of hot water and bake in slow oven (325 deg. F.) until custard begins to set, about 40 minutes. Fold the 6 tablespoons of sugar gradually into stiffly beaten egg whites and continue beating to a thick meringue. Spread over hot bread pudding and return to slow oven (325 deg. F.) until lightly browned, about 10 minutes. Serve hot or chilled.

Those who dote on the flavor of coffee will enjoy mocha bread pudding. Substitute equal parts of coffee cream and coffee for the milk in a favorite bread pudding recipe. Serve plain or with a mocha custard sauce.

For a pleasing chocolate flavored bread pudding, add ½ cup chocolate bits to the cubed bread before adding liquid mixture. Bake like plain bread pudding.

This Is My Story ★ ★ By Gen. Jonathan Wainwright

coming of the night, even though Corregidor itself was under bombardment and shelling, Bataan was something dead that lay up there two miles across the dark water.

If there is anything worse than a battlefield that shakes with explosions and the cries of men it is one that becomes mute and dead and just sprawls there broken and exhausted. That was Bataan on the night of April 9, 1942.

In the last hours of Bataan I knew, at least, that I had the support of my Commander-in-Chief. President Roosevelt radioed MacArthur asking him to relay to me an expresssion of his (Roosevelt's) support, ". . . if you (MacArthur) concur both as to substance and timing." The message, which we received simultaneously on Corregidor, read:

"I am keenly aware of the difficulties under which you are waging your great battle. The exhaustion of your troops obviously precludes the possibility of a major counterstroke unless our efforts to get food to you should quickly prove successful. Because of conditions over which your forces have no control I am modifying my orders to you as contained in my telegram to Gen. MacArthur February 9 and repeated March 23. (The no-surrender note.)

"I shall leave to your own best judgment any decisions affecting the future of the Bataan garrison. I have only admiration for your soldierly conduct and your performance of your difficult mission and have every confidence that whatever decision you may sooner or later make will be dictated by the best interests of the country and of your splendid troops. I am still hopeful that the efforts of the Navy to supply you by submarine will be successful and in time, and that at least one or more of the surface vessels trying to run the blockade will reach you soon.

"I deem it proper and necessary that you should be assured of complete freedom of action and of my full confidence in the wisdom of whatever decision you may be compelled to make."

Just before I received the above message from Mr. Roosevelt I had transmitted to him the dreadful news that Bataan had fallen. He promptly radioed back, in part:

"I am hopeful you will be able to hold Corregidor. However, you are assured of freedom of action and my confidence in your wisdom in whatever decision you may make. —Franklin D. Roosevelt."

I radioed back the following message from Corregidor to the White House:

"Your confidence in my judgment in this desperate situation, as well as the kindness of your message, have my heartfelt gratitude. I have done all that could have been done to hold Bataan, but starving men without air and with inadequate artillery cannot endure the terrific aerial and artillery bombardment to which my troops were subjected. The Japanese have emplaced heavy artillery on south shore of Bataan and now keep Corregidor under constant artillery fire as well as air bombing.

"This morning we have been informed that enemy is now landing in considerable force on Cebu. Due to communication difficulties I have no further information on the progress of this landing. Obviously if the enemy takes Cebu it will be impracticable to ship the supplies which have been assembled there. An unusually large number of hostile warships and transports have been operating in waters close to southern islands during the past 48 hours. The enemy next will direct his attention to other islands of the Visayan group.

"Communication with Bataan troops is cut so I have no knowledge of terms arranged by Gen. King . . ."

And I finished the message from Corregidor with this:

"The American flag still flies on this beleaguered fortress."

I meant to see that it kept flying.

(Monday: The Battle of Corregidor begins.)

"WITHOUT impairing the efficient operation of all the functions of the Government, I have steadily and without ceasing pressed on in that direction. This policy has encouraged enterprise, made possible the highest rate of wages which have ever existed, returned large profits, brought to the homes of the people the greatest economic benefits they ever enjoyed, and given to the country as a whole an unexampled era of prosperity."

FAIR TAX CUT

SENATOR GEORGE, Democrat of Georgia, should be commended for his statesmanlike attitude toward tax revision.

Though a leader in the demand for relief of the overburdened taxpayer, the Georgian refuses to appease the demagogue.

He specifically opposes the glib proposal to eliminate the 3 per cent federal normal income tax, and thus automatically remove 12,000,000 citizens from the income tax roll.

The Senator favors reducing the rate on low income taxpayers so that the impost won't be burdensome, but he doesn't think it would be wise to take anyone off the tax rolls altogether.

It is politically and socially desirable in a self-governing Republic to make all the citizens, even those in modest circumstances, aware of their obligation to support the government.

This will dispel the poisonous illusion that the government can support the citizen.

There is an additional technical factor involved which adds to the validity of Senator George's sensible and forthright position.

The implication that elimination of the 3 per cent tax would eliminate 12,000,000 persons from the obligation of paying taxes to the Federal government is FALSE and GROSSLY MISLEADING.

For even, if this direct and recognizable tax were eliminated, workers and others in low and moderate income brackets WOULD CONTINUE TO BE TAPPED HEAVILY for indirect taxes, including import dutics, cigaret and liquor taxes, miscellaneous excise taxes, and indirect taxes HIDDEN in the selling prices of all the goods which they buy.

Corporations must rely on their customers—the little fellows—to provide the wherewithal for meeting taxes and all other elements of cost.

But the curse of these heavy indirect taxes is that they are CONCEALED, and the ultimate payer is not aware of the nature of his tax contribution.

Thus, it is well to keep direct taxes as an indicator of the burden of extravagant government.

Mr. George, in holding these views, is a leader in demanding frugality in the conduct of government, so that taxpayers, large, medium and small, can be relieved of current burdens which have become well nigh intolerable.

HONORED GUESTS

NOTHING could be more pleasant than the sight of thousands of sailors on our Boston streets.

Watching them go by with broad smiles on their faces and bright campaign ribbons on their chests, we can all gladly say:

"This is the day for which we've lived and prayed."

Let every Bostonian strive to make these young men's stay enjoyable and truly memorable.

Let our law-enforcement authorities and agencies do everything in their power to serve and protect them and to keep them out of the clutches of the vulture-like few that would exploit them.

Let us make their visit such that they will want to repeat it every year as long as they live.

Of course, if we were fully awake and had the wisdom and foresight to return our geographically important port to its rightful prominence in world commerce, we would have sailors on our streets all the time and many of the lads now here temporarily would be encouraged to make Boston their home city.

I had less power to part away,

Kisses make men loath to go.

BURTON RASCOE, commentator on dramatic and literary matters, says that, "unappreciated" by film producers, John Emerson, the story editor, and Anita Loos, the scenario writer, passed their early married life in Hollywood in comparative poverty and that their suffering in this respect was only relieved when Anita sold "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" to a New York publisher and in so doing got the unhappy couple "out of hock."

Anita Loos

I wonder who fed the impressionable Mr. Rascoe that bunk. Before going to Hollywood, Emerson was one of the most successful men in the theater as an actor, playwright and stage director. He made plenty of money on Broadway and saved most of it. In 1915 he resigned as general stage director for Charles Frohman and went to Hollywood where he directed many successful films, never being paid less than a thousand dollars a week. At the same time Anita Loos was a highly-paid scenario writer. Anita didn't write "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" until 1925. By that time, due to the appreciation of their respective abilities by film producers, John and Anita must have had at least a million bucks in the bank.

STOGIE DEPARTMENT: In mentioning the stogies I had lost because of my rash remark about an infantry sergeant with a mustache being a rarity I added: "I have not yet heard of an infantry sergeant with a Van Dyke beard, but am expecting to at any moment." Well, sir, I have before me a snapshot of Infantry Sgt. William Calhoun Hope of the 30th Division, U. S. Army. He has a Van Dyke beard. His wife, who sent me the snapshot, demands an award of a half a barrel of stogies.

QUERIES FROM CLIENTS: Q—What do you think of the proposed title bout between Joe Louis and Billy Conn? A—Doesn't excite me in the least. Billy hasn't a chance with Joe. For that matter, neither has any heavyweight now fighting . . . Q—You recently referred to the golfing attire known as "plus fours." What was the origin of this name? A—Comes from the measurements of British army breeches, for which the regulations called for "reaching the knee plus four inches" . . . Q—What I would like to know is what relation is my husband's brother's wife to me? A—In the strictest sense of the term she is not a relative of yours. However, I hope you girls have not been quarrelling. And if the children of your husband's brother's wife want to call you 'auntie' you shouldn't make the kiddies feel badly by objecting.

PLEASE NOTE: In 1942, a Californian wrote me that her sister had a boy friend who was a U. S. Army paratrooper. The sister liked the young man but was undecided as to whether she wanted to marry him. While the young woman was hesitating, the young gentleman fell in love with her grandmother and married her. Can Brooklyn top that: a grandmother marrying her granddaughter's boy friend? Anyway, the same Californian now sends me a newspaper clipping which reveals that the grandma, now 45 years old, has just had a baby. Her husband, recently discharged from the Army, is 27. Young women with boy friends should give this true tale a thought. Be careful. If your grandma is a widow, don't leave your boy friend alone with her too much. You never can tell.

UP THE LADDER: A corporal when married. A sergeant at the time of the birth of the first baby. A second lieutenant on the baby's first birthday. A first lieutenant on her second birthday. That is the record of U. S. Army Lt. Charles L. Sutton of Fairchance, Pa. Just goes to show what marriage and becoming a proud papa can do for a man.

WASHINGTON SCENE

By GEORGE DIXON

(Distributed by King Features Synd. Reproduction prohibited)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20—A disgruntled-looking citizen stalked into the office of Sen. Warren G. Magnuson of Washington and demanded to see the solon.

Miss Mary Averill, receptionist, asked the nature of his business and the visitor said he had been insulted. Miss Averill summoned Mr. Bill Golden, who handles the Senator's press and public relations.

Sen. Magnuson

"In what manner were you insulted?" asked Mr. Golden, who is a bit of a purist.

The visitor whipped out a diagram.

"See this," he said. "This is a drawing I made of the bandstand where the Marine band holds its concerts. I was insulted there."

"You were insulted at a Marine bandstand concert?" ejaculated Mr. Golden. "How?"

"You see this," said the fellow, pointing at the diagram. "These are stairs. I have marked them 'wooden stairs for common people.'

"Then there is another set of stairs here. I have marked them 'upholstered stairs for the upper crust.'"

"Very graphic," murmured Mr. Golden.

"Yes," said the fellow, "I think it is a good diagram if I say so myself. Well I went up the stairs for the upper crust. I sat down, but a Marine sergeant came over and said I couldn't sit there. He said they were reserved.

"'Oh,' I said, 'I guess these are for the upper crust. Well, I am a citizen.' The Marine sergeant said he didn't care what I was and made me move. I was insulted."

★ ★ ★

MR. GOLDEN asked when the hideous insult had occurred. The fellow scratched his head, striving for recollection.

"Let's see," he said. "It was . . . it was a year ago last July."

"You mean July, 1944?"

"No, it was July, 1943."

Mr. Golden asked him why he waited so long.

"Oh," said the fellow, "I didn't want to make any trouble for anyone while there was a war going on."

★ ★ ★

MR. GOLDEN asked the visitor why he had picked out Magnuson instead of some other Senator. The fellow seemed surprised.

"Because," said the fellow, "I have a daughter in Seattle!"

★ ★ ★

ROBERT E. SMITH, one of our better-known journalists, received a release recently from the Civil Aeronautics Administration of the Department of Commerce.

The handout left many questions unanswered, so Mr. Smith decided to go to the CAA and get the gaps filled in.

The release bore the printed name of Charles L. Stanton as administrator.

But Stanton's name was out, and the name "Theodore P. Wright" typewritten over it.

★ ★ ★

IT WAS 2:30 Saturday afternoon when Mr. Smith arrived at the Commerce Building. He told the guard at the gate he wished to see Mr. Theodore P. Wright.

The guard said there was no such person.

"Nonsense," snapped Mr. Smith; "he's the Civil Aeronautics Administrator!"

"No, he's not," returned the guard. "Mr. Stanton is."

Mr. Smith remonstrated. The guard called the sergeant, who in turn called the captain.

All three supernumeraries insisted there was no Mr. Wright in the joint.

"Then look at this," said Mr. Smith, triumphantly, producing the handout. The three studied it for a minute, then the captain said:

"I don't think Mr. Stanton would like having his name crossed out like that!"

★ ★ ★

FINALLY Mr. Smith prevailed on the minion to call Mr. Stanton.

"Listen, Mr. Stanton," said the captain, "there's a fellow down here trying to tell us you are not the administrator—what's that?—oh, I'm sorry, Mr. Stanton, when did that happen?"

The captain turned from the phone:

"By gosh, he isn't!"

It developed that Mr. Stanton had been administrator but was demoted to deputy administrator, and that Mr. Wright has been administrator—for nearly 10 months!

★ ★ ★

THE CAPTAIN said that if Mr. Wright is the head man he ought to be listed. Mr. Stanton agreed. "All right," said the captain, "what's his extension?"

Mr. Stanton said he would look it up. He was back on the phone in about five minutes.

"I don't know," he said. "I can't find it myself."

ALL AROUND TOWN: Amazing what a little authority will do. Choo Choo Johnson, who is usually one of the gayer gals about town, has turned into a frightful school marm ever since Jack Harris put her in charge of the showgirls opening at his new Club London. Now she rules the rehearsal roost with an iron hand and has even put her young ladies on training schedule with an "out of the cafes" curfew of 1 a. m. until rehearsals are over

TIMES SQUARE NOTES: The Wesson brothers took their elderly mother to see Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy at the Waldorf. When the act was over she pointed at Charlie and asked: "What does he need the other fellow for?" . . . Nick Condos dropped in for dinner at the Coq Rouge all by his lonesome the other night. He ordered his own solo dinner and then tenderly selected choice items from the menu to be sent via tray to his wife, Martha Raye, and an old girl friend who lived across the street from the Coq. It seemed the two lasses were too busy talking to go out to dinner!

Hollywood

By Louella O. Parsons

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 20—Co-producer Hedy Lamarr isn't the boss lady on "Strange Woman" for nothing. Today, without a by-your-leave from Hunt Stromberg or any other of her associates, Hedy signed Gene Lockhart for the role of her stingy old husband in the movie.

She thinks Gene is a swell actor, and since he worked with her in her first hit, "Algiers," she believes he is lucky for her.

I get a big kick out of these stories of the beautiful Lamarr as a business woman. About a week ago she was huddling with Hunt and Jack Chertok at her home and was right in the midst of production costs, etc., when suddenly the baby cried. Hedy disappeared into the blue and left the gentlemen with pencils poised in the air. An hour later she returned and smilingly said: "I'm sorry, but it was time to feed the baby and put her to bed."

THE DEAL that Andrew Stone, producer, made with Author Mildred Cram, is different. Stone got an idea for a story which he called "Fifty Million Women." He told it to Miss Cram and she was so fascinated she said if he would allow her to write it into a 25,000-word serial she would hand him the picture rights at a nominal figure. The deal was concluded and Jeanette MacDonald approached for the lead. The story concerns five department store employes who pool their assets, live together and each follows a career—Jeanette singing, of course.

* * *

JOHN GARFIELD came in from Laguna today where he's been on location with "The Postman Always Rings Twice." He said he was very upset to hear he had been one of the pickets in front of Warner studio. "I belong to the Screen Actors Guild," he said, "and so far we have taken no active part." He signed a new five-year deal at RKO calling for a picture a year and it has the unusual clause of allowing John to have complete say over what he will do. He told me he has two months to run on his contract at Warners' and is taking a suspension rather than do "Humoresque." The first yarn submitted to him is Dan Mainwaring's "Build My Gallows High," a murder mystery. What? Another detective coming up?

SNAPSHOTS OF HOLLYWOOD COLLECTED AT RANDOM: There will be no divorce for Gloria Swanson and Bill Davey. She is asking for a legal separation, and he wants an annulment; all those plans Betty Hutton made to give Ted Briskin a birthday party have to be called off. They head for Chicago today as business calls him home; Ella Raines, who finally, finally admitted her separation after our exclusive story, stepping out at the Mocambo with Arthur Hornblow; Johnny Myers was busy introducing J. A. Krug to many film folk at the Mocambo at a dinner given him. In the opinion of many people who should know, Krug will accept Eric Johnston's $75,000 a year offer to act as vice-president of the Motion Picture Producers' Ass'n.

* * *

KATHRYN GRAYSON leaves on a bomb tour, and she will not divorce John Shelton before she leaves. Everyone on the MGM lot is betting a dollar to a doughnut they will reconcile; the Van Heflins are very excited over building their first home in Brentwood; the party Jane Hollingsworth gave for Pat Smart was very nice.

Boston After Dark

ONE O'CLOCK JUMP — Into type after making the rounds: Artie Dann has something new, but the same nose . . . Artie conducts Harry Green's orchestra at the Mayfair, as he imagines Leopold Stokowski might lose the same musicians . . . It is very funny (but spotted too late in the Dann repertory, we think).

JACKIE MILES, svelte, smart, original and comical, is selling some of the customers under the tables at the Bradford Roof, and Jackie's catch phrase, "Fly away," is catching on . . . Kay Hammond is using her virtuosity at the organ and her good looks to lure new customers to the Fensgate's Satire Room, where business has been on the upbeat since Miss Hammond took over . . . Hector Orlandi, the wounded vet who won his Purple Heart while stepping out of his Army character (of cook) to man a machine gun, is concocting navy bean soup which is unlike anything in town and dishes like spaghetti with clam sauce and shrimp cacciatore that are equally good at The Grotto in the North End.

ONE PROMINENT Boston restaurateur, incidentally, approves of a restricted dessert menu . . . His popular place serves only cheese and ice cream . . . Sweets, this barkeep contends, do not mix alluringly with liquors.

* * *

HE UNDOUBTEDLY is correct from a gross receipts standpoint . . . But Toots Shor built his clientele in New York partly by the variety and tastiness of his desserts; Dinty Moore's in Boston has amassed a thriving luncheon trade with the help of its wonderful pies, and Fan and Bill's in Washington wins more favorable advertising for the rum pie it serves than for its steaks . . . Nothing has compared with the Boston Ritz-Carlton's rich chocolate cake and profiteroles . . . The Statler's ice cream pies drew more summer trade to the Terrace Room than any act of the season, with the possible exception of Carl Brisson.

JOSEPH "JOE BEANS" PALLADINO, whose brother Rocky gave the only New England-bred modern contender for the Kentucky Derby the name of "Little Beans" in honor of Joe, has gone on record by noting an exception to the much-used axiom, "all horse players must die broke!" . . . Joseph lost a friend the other day who attained the two objectives of being an habitual horse-player and the age of three-score-years-and-ten-plus . . . "And he didn't die broke!" Mr. P. announced emphatically . . . "He left a will bequeathing more than $10,000 to his family . . . And if you don't believe me, you will see ads in the newspapers next week asking help in finding the safety deposit box where he must have kept his money."

* * *

ONCE OVER LIGHTLY: Another honor is being added to those heaped on Hildegarde, the chanteuse who sold out the Terrace Room of the Statler . . . She is being crowned Queen of the Roses in connection with National Flower Week on her "Raleigh Room" radio program next Tuesday . . . When Guy Lombardo arrives at Totem Pole next Wednesday for a three-day stand, Lt. Kenny Gardner, Guy's former vocalist, will be with the unit . . . Kenny will not be singing—not yet . . . He has just returned from overseas, but his discharge is not expected until Christmas . . . Lt. Gardner is the sixth member of the Lombardo family to be associated with Guy's Royal Canadians . . . He is the maestro's brother-in-law, being married to sister Elaine.

DENNIS SCULLY, the Brookline policeman who was seriously injured in a motorcycle crackup, is a ringer for Spencer Tracy . . . Archie Robbins, who served in uniform in "Winged Victory" (both the original stage show and the picture) comes to The Vogue Nov. 28.

* * *

SOPHIE TUCKER'S record-breaking business at The Mayfair, by the way, was maintained throughout Sophie's four-week engagement . . . Business abated very little, however, when the last of the Red Hot Mamas took her bow (Boston) . . . At Sophie's salary it is almost impossible for a night club with as limited a seating capacity as The Mayfair's to operate at a profit . . . But the prestige of the engagement and the attendant publicity . . . The Mayfair as a result of it will get all new customers.

Credit and Criticism Where They Are Due

By AUSTEN LAKE

THIS WAS INTENDED to be a sport column for the sake of some cooling thoughts in this otherwise torrid corner. It will wind up as such! But first a piece of unfinished business concerning Bill Morris, the legless merchant marine whose eviction troubles were aired in this column last week.

Austen Lake

Bill will like this! It's an unsolicited letter from Herb Baldwin, publicity manager for the B. & M. R. R., who says, "Young Billy Morris was with our bond selling tour on this railroad and I traveled with him for several weeks. There isn't a nicer kid in North America. In fact, among our many 'big-name' personalities he did more to stimulate bond sales than anybody and generally captivated us with his cheerful spirit."

And here's another volunteer telephone call from former Federal Judge Hugh D. McLellan, U. S. Treasury's bond-drive official. He said of Bill, "That kid wasn't through fighting when he lost his legs and hands. He was an ace on our 'Blood and Bond Cavalcade' through New England and we couldn't stop him even when his physical condition was such he should have been in the hospital. That boy gave all he had and never asked a return favor."

I didn't know, before these communications, that these people knew you, Bill! Show this to your janitor next time he comes bouncing up with complaints about Mrs. Bill using too much hot water. For here's the payoff! Your landlord called me 'tother day with a change of heart. He said the eviction proceedings were off, that you are securely installed in your apartment. So everything ends happily and if you have any more troubles let me know!

Ted Collins Lays It on the Line

TED COLLINS, THE OWNER of the pro football Yankees, is bland on the surface and has a round-faced jollity which deceives strangers into thinking he is laughing his way through life. But there is a speculative smoulder in his eye and glint that hints of stubborn stuff underneath.

When Ted decided to sink a bundle into wartime pro football, frankly I thought, though didn't say so, that he was about to buy a turnstile flop and pay the costs from his own living flesh. Though he was no lickpenny, dumb or faint-hearted gent, the race seemed between Mr. Collins' cash and courage. He was in competition with some of sports' most rabid, avaricious, hard-shelled go-getters in the field of mercenary athletics.

But jolly Ted proves no docile pussy-cat character and has given the pro grid game a fine, sanitary airing in a current "Look" article entitled "I fell among the football pros"—a scriptural paraphrase with an obvious implication. He tells how the fine old financial foxes of the pro league sold him a regiment of arthritic cripples and generally clipped him from behind at every turn. He says, "They sold us the lame and the halt, the aged and the extremely young, the used-to-was and the never-will-bes. George Marshall, who owns a Washington laundry, wringers included, as well as the Washington Redskins, has been known for many years as The Magnificent! I was not long in pro football before I learned why."

Then Ted, whom I might add I have not as yet met, goes on, "George offered to sell us five players at $400 each, he to pick the players." (Ed.—Holy Cow, Ted! What a credulous kid. Why didn't you read my columnar file—Orchidaceous George and his merchandising theories. You'd have saved yourself some pain and pelf.) But hear Ted further, "He (Marshall) first sent us three men. After one look Herb Kopf, as hard up for material as he was, had to say, 'Thank you, no!'

"One of these gentlemen was 45 if he was a day, didn't have a spear of hair on his head and, let alone football, was scarcely in condition for walking. Marshall soon delivered us another, who played one game without knowing the signals, collected his pay and departed."

Collins sums up that his first season's experience in pro-football cost him, in addition to his $50,000 franchise fee, a net loss of $43,000. And that ain't corn flakes!

Marshall Rubbed Us Wrong

THIS COMES AS AN INTERESTING revelation, (1) because Ted Collins has fielded, miraculously, a team that has pinned back the Redskins' ears and won two games and tied one with no losses, an almost incredible feat for his sophomore year, and (2) because George Marshall is a pet anathema among Boston sportsmen. The only thing we like better than seeing Ted's Yanks beat the Redskins is beating 'em twice, thereby causing Gorgeous George to shudder off his skin, which is quite a spectacle to see.

I remember George first in the opening game at Braves Field in 1933 when he appeared before the left field bleacher crowd where his only serviceable football had been accidentally kicked and retained by the fans as a souvenir. And George had spread his arms like the late Cyrus Dallin's statue. "The appeal to the Great Spirit" and pleaded pathetically to give the ball back. Which was not done! So George fell back on his only other football, a seam-busted, pumpkin-like bladder like a kid's balloon.

That was the beginning of a mutual irritation which flourished twixt him and us until the day when he punished the Boston people by removing his pro team to Washington. In the intervening years he carried on a goofy feud, by calling Bostonians "horse crazy people" and saying our "sporting heritage had passed through the pari-mutuel windows." Which had more than an element of truth and was therefore twice as painful. So the case of George P. Marshall vs. the Boston people has been a delirious topic for table conversation and it is comforting to know that the years have not mellowed the fine old growly's character or his talent for putting the blister on people.

Only it is surprising to learn that Ted Collins, who has proved a pretty cozy gent in promotional matters, has just discovered what we Bostonians knew all along. And it is also reassuring to know that we have a pro promoter with enough manly spunk and gumption to take such grasping guys his paternal woodshed! Nice goin' Ted! You deserve support!

Tufts Drubs Terriers

By MURRAY KRAMER

TUFTS OVAL, Oct. 20—Boston University returned to football competition for the first time since 1942 here this afternoon against a heavily favored Tufts eleven. This game in many ways typified the daffy collegiate season to date. It was Boston University's opening game and the season's windup for Tufts.

Going into this fray, the Jumbos had downed Coast Guard, Harvard and W. P. I. The only blot on the Jumbo record was a loss to Yale.

FIRST PERIOD

Tufts spent the entire first period deep in Boston University territory but only scored officially once. Halfway through the quarter, Barnhard went ten on an end-around to score but Tufts was holding and was penalized back to its 28.

Barnhard on the same end-around went to the 12 and after a pass failed, Feldman went the distance on a double reverse to score. Irwin place-kicked the extra point.

Score—Tufts 7, B. U. 0.

The Terriers couldn't move offensively and the Jumbos were back on the B. U. 24 as the period ended.

Score—Tufts 7, B. U. 0.

SECOND PERIOD

McNeil advanced to the 22 and Tufts was then moved back to the 27 because of a back in motion. Feldman then took the touchdown special—the double reverse all the way to count. Irwin again converted.

Score—Tufts 14, B. U. 0.

Tufts next took over on the B. U. 40 and Feldman broke clear off tackle and traveled the 40 yards for his third touchdown. Irwin followed with his third successive placement.

Score—Tufts 21, B. U. 0.

Just a few minutes before the half ended, the home club marched from its 40 to the B. U. 32. Here Feldman was rushed back into the game. He swung wide and raced to the seven. On the next play, he smashed off tackle to register his fourth score. Irwin finally missed one. A minute later time ran out.

Score: Tufts 27, B. U. 0.

THIRD PERIOD

The Jumboes kept rolling and hit pay dirt twice in the first four minutes. Irwin on the first play following the kickoff, spun up the middle and kept going until he covered the necessary 67 yards for six points. The conversion failed.

Score: Tufts 33, B. U. 0.

Beers intercepted a Terrier pass and brought it back to the B. U. 46. Irwin hit Beers with a pass on the 21. Beers then completed the drive by scooting 21 yards on a reverse. The conversion again missed fire.

Score: Tufts 39, B. U. 0.

A screen pass from Arrigo to Quaid on the B. U. 35 clicked nicely and Quaid behind a wall of interference wracked up the seventh touchdown. Arrigo skirted end for the extra point after the placement effort was blocked.

Just before the period came to a close, the Jumbo reserves rolled 78 yards with Schmidt going over from the four. Ackerman placed kicked the extra point.

Score—Tufts 53, B. U. 0.

KANSAS CITY, Oct. 20 (AP)—James Speaker scored a hole in one on the 162-yard No. 12 hole at Victory Hills golf course.

A few moments later Victor Boss, one of four fellow golfers, stepped up and let go a healthy swing for another hole in one!

NEWARK N. J., Oct. 20 (INS)—John Napurano, Newark fight manager, today was in jail charged with attempted bribe in connection with the Freddy Fiducia-Fred Schott fight at Madison Square Garden in New York on Sept. 10 last.

Napurano denied Fiducia's charges that he had tried to bribe Fiducia to throw the fight. He was held in $1000 bail pending grand jury action.

Bob Blair Risking Auto Title Tonight

TIVERTON, R. I., Oct. 20—A special match race, pitting Navy veteran Bob Blair, Dedham, against Ralph Moody, Army veteran from Taunton, has been added to the midget auto program to be held here tonight on the banked, macadam oval.

Johnny Ray Returns as Conn Boss in Title Bout

By JACK CONWAY

NEW YORK, Oct. 20—Johnny Ray returned to New York in full command of the Billy Conn managerial forces . . . He will call all of the financial shots between now and the time Conn battles Joe Louis for the world's heavyweight championship next June.

Ray, a former boxer who discovered Conn in a Pittsburgh gym, has not been active since Billy entered the service . . . There were rumors to the effect that Conn has become his own manager and that he would be guided by advice from Mike Jacobs . . . When the final showdown came as to the conditions under which Conn would battle Louis, Johnny Ray, supported by competetent legal advice, was in complete charge.

Johnny Ray

The real delay in Conn's signing was not over tuneup bouts, but rather on the division of the money that may be derived from television . . . The potential possibilities of television are so great that Johnny Ray insisted that Conn receive the same percentage from the television rights that he was getting from the bout . . . He also wished to protect Conn in the event the science of television reaches a point that it will be possible to pipe the actual scenes of the bout as they take place to cities 250 to 400 miles from the scene of the contest.

Mike Jacobs boss of the Twentieth Century Club, finally gave way to Ray, and Conn will receive 20 per cent. of the television and moving picture rights as well as a similar cut from the bout itself . . . It is estimated that Conn's share from the championship battle will be at least $500,000.

Jack Dempsey is the only challenger to ever top this amount . . . Dempsey's share of the receipts of the $2,400,000 gate of his bout with Gene Tunney in Chicago was $600,000 . . . I was present when Dempsey later turned down an offer of $750,000 from Tex Rickard to meet Tunney in a 15-round battle in New York . . . Dempsey stated at the time he felt Tunney had the style that would always beat him . . . The old Manassa Mauler was having trouble with one of his eyes and he did not wish to risk receiving a permanent injury.

Morgan in Hospital Tour

I MET DAN Morgan at Mike Jacobs' office . . . Dan asked to be remembered to Johnny Buckley, Dan Carroll and Rip Valenti . . . While talking with Dan, Jimmy Johnston came into the office . . . Morgan used to manage Jack Britton, while Johnston was pilot of Ted (Kid) Lewis . . . These welterweights battled 20 times, and some of their bouts were staged in Boston.

Morgan stated he expected to go to New England on a tour of service hospitals . . . Dan says service men have displayed keen interest in boxing . . . Morgan is one of the few managers who saw most of the old-timers in action.

"I have a list of five old-timers anyone of whom I believe could have beaten Joe Louis if they had met him when they were at their peaks," said Dan . . . "They were Bob Fitzsimmons, Jim Jeffries, Sam Langford, Jack Johnson and Jack Dempsey.

"Louis has a head weakness which is why Tony Galento and other rivals have been able to knock him down . . . No heavyweight could have had a head weakness and stood up before the five heavyweights I mentioned.

"Louis is a fine boxer . . . Joe was taught the art of self defense by Jack Blackburn, an old-timer . . . If it had not been for the knowledge Joe absorbed from Blackburn, Louis would never have proved such a great champion.

"I have always admired Louis for his willingness to meet all-comers in the ring . . . His bout with Billy Conn will smash all records for attendance and gate receipts."

* * *

New Life to Boxing

THE SIGNING of Louis and Conn has given new life to boxing . . . With more leading boxers coming out of service each month, it is expected that the promoters throughout the country will be able to present many attractive matches . . . I find New York promoters much interested in the Boston boxing situation . . . They are all eager to have their boxers show in the Hub.

Everett 14, Lynn 7 At End of 3d Period

By MIKE GILLOOLY

EVERETT STADIUM, Oct. 20—Everett High School, odds on favorite for the State championship, swung into its third tilt of the campaign here this afternoon against Lynn Classical before an overflow crowd of over 1000 fans.

Ed Pike, a doubtful starter because of an elbow injury, took his place in the Classical backfield.

Everett has had little difficulty in rolling over Somerville and Salem. This Dennie Glidea outfit had all the power and weight of past elevens but it also had plenty of speed. Classical has only lost one game, a single touchdown defeat at the hands of defending State champion Peabody, and was expected to give Everett an acid test this p. m.

FIRST PERIOD

Everett kicked off but took over two plays later when Bill Vesprini recovered a fumble on the Classical 28. In five plays, that included two first downs, Everett moved to the six, then D'Agostino bowled over three tacklers on his way to score. A pass interception by Tony Mazzon set Everett up on the Classical 44.

Again, Everett marched with a pass from Coggio to Romboli setting the ball on the Classical six. Coggi then passed to Merenda for the score. Classical took the kickoff on its own 38. On first play, Don Miosky passed to Stan Britton, crossing the Everett 40, and Britton escaped the safety man to score. Dooley rushed in to convert.

Score—Everett 14, Classical 7.

SECOND PERIOD

Everett opened the period, following the kickoff on its own 31. With Merenda, Romboli and D'Agostino smashing off tackles and through the line, another march carried to the Classical 16 in nine plays. Here the Classical line stiffened, with Britton standing out, for two downs. Everett went to the air then but Coggio overshot his mark twice as Classical took over. Classical passed, Miosky to Britton, for a first down on the 26, but another fumble set Everett up again, Strahan recovering.

Again, Classical held and Miosky punted out, the first punt of the game. Everett, on a Romboli smash, started from its own 46 and moved to the Classical 29 in three plays before the half ended.

Score—Everett 14, Classical 7.

THIRD PERIOD

Classical took the kickoff back to its own 37. Harry Agganis ripped off a first down to midfield then Miosky passed to Deke Jordan for another on the Everett 32. The attack stalled as Miosky kicked to the 20. Everett returned the punt to the Classical 45 and then took over when Comerford intercepted a pass on his own 43 but a dipping penalty set Everett back to the 28. Everett again started to march with Merenda, Romboli and D'Agostino ripped off first downs to the Classical 21 as the period ended.

Score: Everett 14, Classical 7.

On: Grandmother

One of the things I shall always remember about the play "Victoria Regina" was the time it was brought home to me how fundamentally alike all women are... whether their empire extends beyond the seven seas or stops at five rooms!

One night the Queen of Spain, a grand-daughter of Victoria, came backstage to tell me how well I had captured all the little airs and gestures of Victoria as an old lady. I couldn't help smiling at this, for I had slavishly copied every one of those "royal" mannerisms from my own grandmother whose only subjects were right in the family.

This story proves how really human Victoria was—it's the reason why playing Victoria will always be one of my favorite roles.

I'm happy that you've chosen "Victoria Regina" for tonight's play when once again, I can be the frightened girl, the adoring wife and the imperious old lady who ruled England for more than half a century!

Al Priest Looks Good in Victory

Local fistic fans were raving about Al (Red) Priest of Cambridge today after his decisive decision victory over Handsome Willie Shanks of Montreal in one of the four 10-round bouts at the Garden last night which saw Jim McDaniels, 149, of Los Angeles, kayo Broadway Johnny Jones, 150½, of New York, in the sixth round of the Goodwin AC finale.

Charlie Lomski, 180, of New York, brother of Leo, an ex-light heavy contender of a few years ago, was lucky to last two rounds against the savage punching of John Pretzie, 192, of Boston, and Joe Blackwood, 154, of Paterson, N.J., a newcomer hereabouts, flattened Jack Capparell, 158, Roxbury, in the eighth.

A crowd of 5753 contributed a gross gate of $10,985 and a net of $7854 to witness the fisticuffs.

McDaniels' k. o. over Jones was spectacular. He dropped Jones for nine under a barrage of punches and put him away with a right when he got up.

Harvard, Sub Base Tangle at Stadium

By HERB FINNEGAN

HARVARD STADIUM, Oct. 20—Harvard's thin-ranked Crimsons, victors over Rochester last week, tried to make it two straight this afternoon when they faced the old and heavier squad from New London's sub base.

The visitors were beaten by Cornell in an early-season game and were outscored by Mike Holovak's PT-Boaters last week, but were supremely confident of victory today.

"I had been with the squad only 3 days when we played Cornell," said Coach Com. Ed Cherry, "and our own mistakes beat us against the PT's. The score, you know, was 7-7 at half-time, and if we hadn't got fumble-itis in the last half we'd have scored at least two more TD's."

Pass defense was another weakness in the Tars' defense last week, and for that reason Harvard was expected to fill the air with passes today, rather than buck the line which averaged better than 200 pounds and which featured Howard Chefner, last year with Annapolis.

FIRST PERIOD

Harvard won the toss and elected to kick off. LeBart's boot was taken by Jones at the 10 and run back to the 35, where Jones fumbled. Faber recovered for Harvard. Passes failing to connect, Sub Base took the ball on downs on its own 33.

Two plays netting only four yards, Jones quick-kicked out of bounds on Harvard's 32. Jackson got off a long kick which Jones picked up on the 10 and ran back to the 24. A Jones-Charouhus pass was good for nine yards, and Moravec made it a first down on the 36.

Later, Jones quick-kicked to Flynn at the 20, and Flynn raced it back to the Harvard 41. Here a beautiful Cowan-Jackson lateral enabled the latter to scamper to the Sub Base's 38.

But Sub Base's line was concrete, and Jackson kicked out of bounds on the Sub Base 25. Jones skirted end for 10 yards but Sub Base was offside on the play and set back to the 20. Third down and 13, Jones attempted to pass, found no receiver open so skirted end to the 38 for a first down. A second Jones pass was intercepted by Faber at the Sub Base 37, first down Harvard.

The period ended with Harvard in possession of the ball on its own 33.

Harvard 0, Sub Base 0.

SECOND PERIOD

Harvard seemed to be on its way midway through this period. Cowen received Jones' punt at the 33. A moment later he squirmed to the 44 for a first down. Then Flynn passed to Champion for 6 yards, and Cowen scooted to the Sub Base 45 for second first down.

Here Sub Base was penalized 15 yards for holding, and Harvard had a first down on the Base's 30. This was their golden opportunity.

But Hodges intercepted Flynn's pass on the 24, nd interference on Jones' pass gave Sub Base the ball on Harvard's 48. Thus the complexion of the game changed i na trice. Jones ripped off a neat run to Harvard's 35 for a first down.

But there was no quit in Harvard. When Jones attempted a fourth-down pass Foster threw him on the Sub Base 45, and Harvard had a first down. Then Harvard went to town to score a moment later.

Cowen on two rushes reached the Sub Base 42 for a first down, and Vilushis scooted to the 25 on an end around play. Roche was thrown for a loss attempting to pass, and all seemed lost when it was fourth down 16 to go. But at this juncture Ross wobbled a downfield pass to Flynn, who picked the ball out of a Sub Basser's hands on the two-yard line and scooted over for the score. LeBart kicked the point.

Harvard 7, Sub Base 0.

With only two minutes to go, Base started to pass wildly and Ken O'Donnell grabbed one for Harvard on the Base 30 as the half ended.

Harvard 7, Sub Base 0.

Medford High came back in the second canto, recovering a loose ball on the Melrose 26 with Buzzer Hayes carrying to the 16. Paglucia knocked off a first down, and then scored.

Tommmy Emerson, scoring for the second time in the same period, put the Red Raiders ahead, 13 to 6, at the half.

Irish Tangle With Panthers

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 20.—Hugh Devore's surprise-laden Notre Dame grid warriors, labeled No. 2 team in the nation, moved against Pittsburgh's twice-defeated Panthers here today and ruled impressive favorites to extend their unbeaten 1945 string to four games.

Led by Frank Danciewicz, whom Dartmouth Coach Tuss McLaughry last week called "the best quarterback in America," the Irish marshaled their smooth-working T-formation for performance before a capacity crowd.
